Continuing Education for HealthCare Professionals

To Whom it May Concern:

It is my pleasure to recommend Judith Barr as a colleague and a valued author of a number of professional continuing education courses that are presented on my company's website.

I am president of Professional Development Resources, Inc., a private nonprofit Florida corporation whose mission is to develop and present graduate-level continuing education courses to mental health professionals to be completed as part of their license renewal requirements. Our organization is accredited by the American Psychological Association, the National Board for Certified Counselors, the Association of Social Work Boards, and a number of state accrediting bodies.

My association with Ms. Barr spans the time from 2007 through the present, during which she and I have collaborated on a number of projects culminating in the online publication of self-study continuing education courses offered to psychologists, social workers, professional counselors, and marriage and family therapists.

Throughout our association, Ms. Barr has demonstrated the highest qualities of a skilled therapist, including a very thoughtful approach to depth psychotherapy. She also has the ability to teach her approach not only to her clients and students, but also to her colleagues. Her courses have been very well received by those professionals who have completed them.

I look forward to an ongoing association with Ms. Barr and would recommend her to any individual or organization in need of an accomplished therapist, teacher, and author.

Sincerely,
